It's been a rough week for boys basketball coaches at Fort Wayne Community Schools. Head coaches Chris Hahn and Mike Rutkowski have been involved in three incidents in the past week, including one that led to the suspension of a player. One day earlier this week, Hahn was involved in a separate incident. That player's suspension has now been lifted. And today, Hahn suspended one of his players for the first time in his career. Hahn took to his Twitter page and confirmed that his son who played in an all-star game with John Gray is being suspended for the rest of the year for "disrespectful behavior." They will not be permitted to coach or practice with the team. In a later statement released by FWC Schools, Hahn said: "The suspension that I just received, which I feel was way out of proportion, was for disrespectful behavior that was directed to a coach of another program. This type of behavior is not representative of the standards that we have in this program or in our community." Hahn added that the incident has taught him a valuable lesson about respect. Both Coach Hahn and Coach Rutkowski have been suspended for 3 games (3 ACC games) for this type of behavior, therefore they will not be permitted to coach or practice with the team. Both coaches have the opportunity to appeal the suspension. If they are unsuccessful, they will be allowed to return on Nov. 12 for the start of the regular season. If they are successful in appealing the suspension, they will be allowed to return on Nov. 12, for the start of the regular season. FWC Schools released a statement about this situation, including the suspension and appeal process: Fort Wayne Community Schools is aware of a situation involving a coach of the Fort Wayne Warriors in which the coach has been suspended. The school takes student safety and well-being seriously, and will address the matter in a timely manner. The student in question has been suspended for the remainder of the season. The coach has the right to appeal the suspension. If the coach is unsuccessful in the appeal, the student will be permitted to return to school. In the meantime, the school district is concerned for the safety of students and staff and the privacy of the matter will be handled by FWC Schools accordingly.
