learned about the planet Mars According to NASA, the Mars 2020 Rover will be a compact rover, weighing only about 1,600 pounds, just like the tiny Curiosity Rover.
Both missions will look for signs that Mars ever had life and that there's still liquid water on the surface. The rovers will search for fresh water and organic molecules as well as search for the earliest signs of life on the Red Planet. So, how do scientists know that Mars used to be a more Earth-like planet? The following is a list of the most interesting and useful things that scientists have learned about Mars in the past decades. 4. Mars used to be Earth-like While both Mars and Earth share the same axis of rotation, the tilting of Mars' orbit around the sun means that
