DirectX 12 or AMD GPU Shader Version 3.0 120128 Jan 14, 2020 An introduction to DirectX 12. 120128 Jan 14, 2020 Define the GPGPU memory usage and footprint in your application. 120112 Jan 1, 2020 Vulkan vs DirectX 11. Vulkan is built for desktop GPUs. Essentially, a modern GPU has built-in drivers that present a consistent API (API = Application Programming Interface). For example: with the GeForce RTX GPU, the driver exposes the API via the software library nvidia-smapi (the graphics engine also exposes some custom services). The software library exposes a consistent API: much like the Windows API, it can be used to write applications that run on the GPU to do things like compute shaders (GPU shaders). If you are developing your own software, the API is a way of writing software that can run on the GPU. DirectX 11 on the other hand comes with its own API that's separate from the Windows API. With DirectX 11, the Microsoft software library is not exposed by the GPU driver, and the API that gets exposed is not consistent. 120111 Jan 1, 2020
