The screenshot shows a file download interface. On the left, there is a blue folder icon with a cloud inside. Below it, a rating of 6.4 is shown with five stars and the text '2865 VIEWS'. To the right, the text reads 'File was found and ready to download!' followed by 'UPDATED 14 HOURS AGO'. Below this, it says 'Fastest Source: useenet.nl' with a checkmark under the domain. A note below that says 'Click the download button and select one of the found cloud sources.' A prominent blue 'Download' button with a download icon is visible, along with a 'SECURE SCANNED' badge. At the bottom of the interface, a message states 'You need to log in before you can post comments.' Below this message are three navigation icons: 'Navigation' (a blue icon with three horizontal bars), 'Registration' (a blue icon with a folder and two people), and 'FAQ' (a blue circular icon with three arrows).

Djilas, who was in his late fifties at this time, spent the rest of his life trying to escape the era of war in his native country. So his speeches were littered with references to the youth, the futility of war, and how communism would finally put an end to those things. The new socialism was also supposed to be a children's paradise. There would be no more hunger, poverty, crime, or unemployment. In fact, everything about the new order was more than good enough for grown-ups to want for themselves. The old narrow interests of class had been replaced by the broader dimensions of nation and race. Yugoslavia's ethnic diversity now meant that everyone was supposed to get along. The state media began promoting the notion of a family "for all children, all over the world."

Advertisements for "socialist houses" promised a life of great warmth and security for the world's children. Schooling was offered in a variety of interesting and practical programs. The government even took it upon itself to adopt the world's children. The "Iron curtain" has never been so far away. Schools of art, science and philosophy were built, along with many libraries. Like the world's workers, the children had an exciting work day of eight hours. They would have a well-paid holiday at the end of the week. And they would all be fed well too. The best-known of the benefits of socialism was the "Motherland's hospital." The new system was designed to be like the human body. You are born with a heart, stomach, and lungs, and so you are given a family, a school, a free hospital, and a free car. But the market has no place in the new socialist society, as Dr. Pavlov put it. If there is a market, you can never have full security for your children. And the government will never have full control of you. The Soviets actually advertised this security by promising that the state would give mothers free maternity benefits, and would offer them free medical care for their babies. I have had to begin to raise again and again the old issue of the family, which is in the center of any understanding of the happiness of people and of the liberation of the masses. I have written about it, especially about the problems of education and production, and the necessity of a firm system of work for
