Two-time world cruiserweight champion Alexander Povetkin was looking to add the WBA strap to his collection of world titles when he made his way to England to challenge British and Commonwealth champ David Haye at the Manchester Arena last Saturday night. The 10-round contest ended in a majority draw with both fighters scoring five points each, but it was Povetkin who looked more in control throughout the evening. Povetkin, 32, had a lengthy career as a cruiserweight before making the decision to make the step up to heavyweight. In his 15-year career, Povetkin has won 10 world titles and endured the heartbreak of failing to lift the WBA title against Wladimir Klitschko in a bid to be crowned undisputed world champion. He has had mixed success in the heavyweight division, winning four fights - but losing five, including to the current WBA and IBF champion Anthony Joshua. Hence, when asked by talkSPORT if he felt that he was now better equipped to go the distance with heavyweight legends, including Joshua, Povetkin said: "First of all, it's not my fight. "We will watch it at home. Let
