University of Edinburgh or in: Ingenieria Economica Guillermo Baca Currea.Q: How to access a parent method from a child class How to access a parent class method from a child class? class A{ public function __construct(){ echo $this->getFoo(); //but I have to use foo() here } public function foo(){...} } class B extends A{ public function __construct(){ echo foo(); //I want to get 'foo()' here } } A: If what you are asking is how to call a method in a parent class from a child class, then you don't have to. You can simply call it from the child class, just like you would call any normal function. class A{ public function __construct(){ echo $this->foo(); } public function foo(){...} } class B extends A{ public function __construct(){ echo A::foo(); //this can also be used } } However, if what you are trying to do is invoke the super class's constructor, then you have to do it manually. It's best if the base class constructor does this for you, but you can call it yourself. class A{ public function __construct(){ parent::__construct(); //Do what you need here } public function foo(){...} } class B extends A{ public function __construct(){ 3e33713323
