Pharmaceutical stocks are some of the best-performing sectors in the S&P 500 on a long-term basis. In fact, there have been four pharma stocks that have achieved a 50% gain in the past 50 years. One stock in particular, Hill-Rom Holdings, Inc. (NASDAQ:HRL), has been a runaway success. The company and others in the sector boast strong fundamentals in the form of a more than doubling of top-line growth over the past decade and increasing margins on their existing products. In addition, sales growth has been supported by ongoing population growth, aging and an increase in health care spending by major consumers. However, due to the strength of the U.S. economy, the pharma sector has faced a bit of a headwind this year. It appears that the fact that the U.S. is the only major economy that is still growing is beginning to weigh on both company profits and the overall health of our healthcare system. The latest downside driver comes from new data from the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services that shows the amount of Medicare spending fell in the last quarter of 2012 at a rate of 2.8% year-over-year. The drop is also the biggest year-over-year decline in Medicare spending since 2010. Essentially, we're seeing a perfect storm that has many in the healthcare sector worried about the sustainability of current trends. This is in addition to a slowdown in the growth of the overall U.S. economy that will put pressure on any company that is heavily exposed to these economic variables. HRL set out to become a leader in the health-care industry by focusing on three main goals: 1) improve the effectiveness and efficiency of healthcare delivery through products, services and innovations; 2) provide care when and where needed; and 3) minimize overall healthcare spending. Let's take a look at some of the latest activity in the stock price of Hill-Rom Holdings, Inc. (NASDAQ:HRL). What's happening to the stock? HRL's stock price has been on the rise over the last few months. Shares of the company soared in early February when the Obama administration announced a push to promote competition among hospital IT vendors. HRL's shares then retreated a bit when it announced a fourth quarter guidance update in early March and once again following the company's earnings report in late March. Hill-Rom earnings beat expectations, but not significantly higher than where analysts thought they would
